CASE STUDY - SELF STORAGE

Space Station Self Storage PLC

Using insights from Awardaroo, Space Station Self Storage grew significantly throughout the recession, fended off much bigger rivals and successfully absorbed the recent VAT increases.

THE COMPANY

Alastair Caldwell, McLaren's former Team Manager, is one of the pioneers of Self Storage. He opened Space Station's first Self Storage store in 1982. It now has five branches, four in West London and one in Slough.

THE CHALLANGES

By 2008 Space Station were competing against giants like Big Yellow and Safestore. Kevin Prince, a new General Manager was appointed with 15 years of Self Storage industry experience and Space Station needed to:

- · Grow during the deepest recession on record
- · Compete against big brand names and
- Build their brand identity

THE SOLUTION

Awardaroo enabled Space Station to carefully track their offline marketing; stop non-performing activities, and pursue strategies with a good return on investment. A new focus on call handling and lead logging enabled measurement of rapport with callers, questions asked, lost calls, and how effectively the busiest times of day were managed.

These, alongside a refocused website, significant improvements in Google rankings achieved through targeted SEO which outperformed industry giants, and a hands-on approach to the management of Google Adwords were central to Space Station's revised strategy.

THE RESULTS

The revised strategy saw Space Station Self Storage grow significantly throughout the recession, fending off much bigger rivals and successfully absorbing the recent VAT increases. The use of Awardaroo enabled staff to be much more sales focussed, creating an increased sense of team leading to a more collaborative working environment.

Self Storage deliver substantial growth for over 5 years and helped us develop the systems and marketing more effective.
